

THE TRIPLE ALLIED ATTACK

In their continuing thrust on the west side between arrows (1) and (2) the Allies yesterday pushed forward at all points, reaching a maximum penetration of ten miles, probably in the region of arrow (1), according to statements made by General March, United States Chief of Staff. At arrow (3) the Germans have been forced to retire back across the Marne. On the east wing new gains near Pourcy, arrow (4), have been won by the Franco-Italian troops.

The dash line indicates the present fighting front. The solid line represents the front at the start of the Allied counter offensive on July 18.

Kin of Heroes Cling To Hope Reports of Death Are Wrong

Discrepancies of Dates on Letters Keep Cheer Alive in Homes

Twenty letters from home which he never received are awaiting somewhere in France Private Gaetano Cilento, of 123 West 115th Street, whose death from a bullet wound was reported in yesterday's casualty list.

In a telegram received from the War Department by Cilento's father, Salvatore Cilento, it was stated that his death occurred June 23. The family had a letter from him complaining that he had not received any mail since he had entered the trenches. It was dated June 24. The discrepancy in dates, his sister said yesterday, has led her to hope that the report of his death may be a mistake.

"I cannot understand his not receiving his mail," she said. "I forwarded him twenty letters many weeks ago."

Hope News Is Incorrect
The family of Private Dominic Mulluza, 123 East Houston Street, reported to have been killed in action, also were led to doubt the accuracy of the War Department's news because of a similar conflict in dates. A letter from him was dated June 19, while his death was said to have occurred June 23. His sister, Salagra Mulluza, has telegraphed Washington for a confirmation of the message.

"When we get started I look for a quick finish, but you know we cannot win this war without some of us going west," wrote Private Michael J. Caveny in a letter to his aunt, Mrs. Daniel Healy, 27 Kearney Avenue, Jersey City. "The people in the States say the Germans are game, but from my experience they are the yellowest race on earth. We expect to get busy in a little while."

The first soldier from Elizabeth, N. J., to make the great sacrifice was Daniel Donahue, 1034 Foresta Street. He was a drafted man, twenty-seven years old.

Private Gale Phillips, of Garfield, N. J., was mentioned in yesterday's dispatches as having succumbed to wounds while in a French hospital. His leg was amputated recently. He wrote to his aunt, Mrs. William Phillips, a few weeks ago that he belonged to a hand grenade detachment which was known as the "suicide company."

Flier Lands at Foe's Hangars, but Escapes

(By The United Press)
LONDON, July 20.—How a British aviator, flying over a German aircraft hangar, descended to the ground and turned his machine gun on the enemy structure, was related to-day in the British Air Ministry communiqué.

The communiqué said: "Yesterday hostile ammunition dumps, railway stations and aerodromes were bombed by our aviators. Seventeen tons of bombs were dropped. In one raid a pilot landed at an aerodrome, turning his machine gun on hangars before arising again. Ten hostile airplanes and six balloons were brought down. Seven of ours are missing."

"During the night railway stations were bombed. Fourteen tons of bombs were dropped. All of our machines returned safely."

Another communiqué stated: "Last night Mannheim was bombed and fire was seen to break out in the Badische Anilin Works. Smoke arose from the Gebrüder factories."

"To-day Offenburg and Oberndorf were bombed. Bombs were observed on factories and railways. One hostile machine was destroyed and two driven down out of control. Four of our machines failed to return."

ers from the forest's leafy bowers are throwing a constant stream of fire on the enemy miles away.

It was just beyond the forest that we saw a poilu who had died for France. His companions had gone away ahead. Where now the crack Allied cannon's smoke drifts back occasionally over the trampled, wire-cluttered wheatfields, this poilu lay, where the Allied line had been not many hours ago. If his dead eyes could have seen what I saw to-day he would have been entirely satisfied.

English Girl Is Heroine
Among the heroines of the present battle is Miss Defrahr, an English girl ambulance driver, who was gravely wounded by a shell while transporting two poilus. The ambulance was demolished. She crawled a considerable distance to the hospital to notify the doctors, and refused treatment until the poilus were cared for. She has been proposed for the Legion of Honor and the war cross.

One type of French tank used in the present battle is the new baby model about the size of a small elephant, but having far more speed and agility. Credit for the speedy round-up of prisoners is due to them in many cases.

Foch Drive Forces Germans to Use 100,000 Reserves
PARIS, July 20.—The Germans have been forced to bring up 100,000 reserves to the army of the German Crown Prince as a result of yesterday's fighting, and the French and Americans, after fluctuations, have been enabled to strongly fortify the newly gained positions southwest of Soissons, says Marcel Hutin in the "Echo de Paris."

M. Hutin adds that the enemy menace toward the Paris region has been frustrated and that the efforts of the Crown Prince against Epernay, Montmédi and Rheims have gone for naught.

The battle begun late yesterday continued with fierceness into the night, the Germans losing better positions to the French, who are fighting uphill. The advance is being won foot by foot owing to the huge reserves thrown in to support the Crown Prince.

To change the front in the middle of a battle, such as Napoleon was obliged to carry out at Waterloo and Leipzig, is a difficult proceeding, points out Major de Cuvier. Notwithstanding the continuity of the front the conditions of warfare have changed less than has been thought, he adds, after the situation of an army engaged in offensive drives which is suddenly confronted by a flank attack as strong as it is unexpected is always grave.

Henri Gall, member of the Chamber of Deputies, who has just returned from the front, writes to the "Matin" an interesting narrative of the fighting east of Rheims. Owing to the maneuvers directed by General Gouraud on July 15, when he ordered his advanced posts to fall back to the French main positions, the French lost hardly 4,000 men in killed and wounded, he said.

On the other hand the Germans lost ten times that number, he writes. By 10 o'clock in the morning a number of German regiments had lost more than half their effectives, and entire companies were almost annihilated and had only a few men left.

Air Raid on Britain Blocked
LONDON, July 20.—A German airplane crossed the Kentish coast this morning and was driven back by the fire of anti-aircraft guns, according to an official announcement.
